Cleric Scores Contention Israelis Represent All Jews

The trial of Adolf Eichmann will not be merely the trial of "a psychopathic butcher" but a trial of the moral and ethical principles of Christianity and Judaism, a Unitarian minister told his congregation.

In a sermon at the First Unitarian Church, Pierrepont Street and Monroe Place, in Brooklyn, N. Y., Rev. Donald W. McKinney said the entire guilt of the Nazi attempts to exterminate the Jewish people did not rest wholly with the Nazis.

"How loud were the voices of protest in the Nineteen Thirties?" Mr. McKinney asked, reports the New York Times. "Continental Europe waited and watched Hitler's experiment — the confusion of political implications into anti-Semitism. If only by its silence, the rest of the world gave its permission. It didn't care. . . . Adolf Eichmann is a symbol of Christian failure."

"All racial, ethnic injustices, all threats to freedom must be seen, recognized, and wrestled with by free men whose commitment is to a morality, an ethic as broad and as visionary as the dream of universal brotherhood and justice. Anything less is a betrayal of the religious heritage which we cherish and a denial of our humanity."

Mr. McKinney questioned the right of Israel rather than an international court to try Eichmann. "The blood of millions of Jews cries out against injustice," he said, "but the trial of the man most criminally involved is, itself, almost a travesty of justice. A people, who for centuries have kept alive the most magnificent ethical and moral code of universal justice . . . are threatening their great religious precepts by the actions of the Israeli state."

The Israeli's contention that they have the right to try Eichmann because they represent all Jews, threatens all Jews living outside of Israel, he said. It carries the dangerous implication "that the countries in which Jews live do not owe them protection other than as foreigners in their midst," he said. "Such an attitude comes perilously and paradoxically close to a reversal of Hitler's dream of a purely Aryan Germany."

The Judaic sense of justice must transcend mere nationalism, he said, according to the New York Times, and "this trial must serve as a very real reminder of the horror that can come to man when

W. J. C. Leader Upholds Right To Emigrate In U. N. Debate

"The right to emigrate is a fundamental human right recognized by the international community and embodied in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights", declared Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, speaking on behalf of the World Jewish Congress, at a meeting of the UN Subcommission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities at UN headquarters in New York. When a government arbitrarily sought to limit or deny this right it violated the Universal Declaration. The World Jewish Congress statement was made during a debate on the Article of Declaration providing that "everyone has the right to leave any country, including his own."

Dr. Perlzweig sharply criticized a statement earlier in the debate by Abdel-Hamid Abdel Ghani, of the United Arab Republic, who had claimed that the right to leave one's country should be recognized by the state as an individual right and not as the right of "collectivities." The Arab speaker had denied that this right could legitimately be invoked to justify the "appeals" to Jews of the Soviet Union and other countries to emigrate to Israel. "This," he said, "would also tend to perpetuate the present state of things in Palestine."

He was followed by V. I. Sapozhnikov of the Soviet Union who objected to plans of the Rapporteur of the Subcommission to use material received from non-governmental organizations which he described as "unobjective and inaccurate", and insisted that, "for the sake of objectivity," only material received from governments should be used. He argued also that the inquiry under discussion should be limited to the specific question of discrimination in the exercise of the right to leave one's country.

Following these speakers Dr. Perlzweig insisted that the article in the Universal Declaration made it plain that the right to leave one's country was given to every one, and that the number of those who availed themselves of it was irrelevant. The exact words were: "Every one has the right to leave any country, including his own."

To attempt to limit the number was to seek to redefine the right and to undermine its validity.

Heredity Clinic To Study N. Y. People For Genetics Research

A human heredity clinic that will draw on New York's "melting pot" population for research in human genetics is being established at Albert Einstein College of Medicine-Bronx Municipal Hospital Center. Such study centers are rare in major metropolitan areas. The specialists at the medical school, therefore consider their project to be a pioneering effort.

The influences of heredity pervade every aspect of human life, from a person's shape and size to his blood type and the way in which he is likely to respond to certain drugs, says the New York Times. Some abnormalities in a person's genetic endowment can result in disease. A few can be advantageous under certain circumstances. Some departures from the "normal" have no known effects on health.

In those aspects that are of interest to medicine, genetic factors are likely to be intimately entwined with factors of environment and often make themselves evident only indirectly. The major emphasis at the new center will be on research. The existence of New York's huge and heterogeneous population is expected to be an important advantage.

Among the research goals listed are analysis of the frequency of certain hereditary traits in such a population; the possible discovery of genetic factors in diseases not now known to have major hereditary aspects and methods to improve the diagnosis of known hereditary diseases.

The New York City Health Research Council has approved $556,491 in enabling funds for the center for its first five years.

Chairman of the heredity center will be Dr. Salome Gluecksohn-Waelsch, Professor of Anatomy (genetics) at the medical school. Co-directors of the clinic will be Dr. Helen M. Ranney, of the Department of Medicine, a specialist in the effects of genetic factors on the blood and circulatory system; and Dr. Ruth T. Gross, who came to the medical school from a position as associate Professor of Pediatrics at Stanford University.

The clinic's specialized knowledge and staff will be available for the treatment and counseling of patients with genetically controlled ailments. The counseling may be an important factor, according to the clinic directors, because many persons fail to realize that some hereditary diseases can be controlled medically or surgically.

In certain rare conditions the early discovery that an infant has an inborn abnormality in body chemistry can profoundly improve the child's chances for normal development if proper medical steps are taken immediately. In some

Ben-Gurion Derides Judaism Of U.S. Jews As "Social"

Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion declared in Tel Aviv, Israel, that "more and more" American Jews "do not know what being a Jew means. For more and more American Jews being attached to a synagogue is more a social than a religious affair," Mr. Ben-Gurion told the annual convention of the Association of Americans and Canadians in Israel, says the New York Herald Tribune.

Mr. Ben-Gurion called for an increased immigration to Israel of young, vigorous, and skilled American Jews in order to: Help Israel maintain "its intellectual and moral superiority" over its Arab neighbors and thereby enable the state to survive. Help American Jewry to gain a "deeper meaning" and thereby enable it to survive.

Discussing American Jewish life, Mr. Ben-Gurion declared that there was no policy of assimilation in America except in the anti-Zionist American Council for Judaism, but there was a "factual, unconscious assimilationism."

With the exception of the religious minority — by which he apparently meant those Jews who follow the Orthodox trend of Judaism — "Jewishness has little meaning" in America, the Prime Minister declared. Apart from the "truly religious" minority, attachment to the synagogue is a "social affair," he said.

Mr. Ben-Gurion prefaced his remarks about American Jewry by saying that, historically European Jewry was never totally accepted by the population at large, while American Jews are of immigrant origin like all other Americans and consider themselves totally as Americans, says the New

Psychologist Was A Leader In Testing, Denied One Age For Retirement, Urged New Pursuits At 60

Dr. Irving Lorge, long a leader in the field of psychological testing, died of a heart attack at St. Luke's Hospital, in New York. He was 55 years old and lived at 390 Riverside Drive. Dr. Lorge was Professor of Education and executive officer of the Institute of Psychological Research at Teachers College, Columbia University, says the New York Times. In collaboration with the late Dr. E. L. Thorndike, who preceded him in the executive post at the institute, he developed the Lorge-Thorndike Intelligence Test.

His work on the test led him to question the theory that the intelligence quotient remains constant throughout life. He concluded, on the contrary, that an individual's I. Q. could be raised as much as 20 points through proper schooling.

Dr. Lorge also helped to rebut the belief that race helps determine intelligence and some psychological characteristics. With seventeen other scientists, he issued a statement to rebut the claims of segregationists that white children were inherently brighter than Negro children.

Dr. Lorge also played a key role in World War II in work for both the civilian and military branches of the Government. In 1942 he was asked by the Office of Price Administration to test the readability of its regulations. He concluded that they were "written in language too difficult for most people to understand." The O. P. A. rules were rewritten in accordance with a special standard of readability previously developed by Dr. Lorge.

He developed the readability test by studies of writings of universal familiarity. Among these were Lincoln's Gettysburg Address; the Twenty-third Psalm; and "Alice In Wonderland." All owe their great popularity, at least partly, to their high readability quotient, he decided.

From 1942 to 1944, Dr. Lorge was a consultant to the Army special training division. His researches brought radical changes in the service methods of teaching illiterates. He also worked for the Office of the Air Surgeon, the Corps of Engineers and the Adjutant General's office, says the New York Times. He won the War Department Award for Patriotic Service.

Dr. Lorge was among the first to question arbitrary methods of establishing retirement age.

"Retirement," he wrote, "should be based on functional rather than chronological considerations. People do not suddenly become unproductive at a given age. Some should be retired at 40 because they can no longer pull their share of the job load, while others may still be able to work effectively at 90."

Men and women approaching 60 are "entering a golden age," he declared, and should take advantage of retirement as a time in which to develop new interests and pursuits. A person may slow down physically, but scarcely at all mentally, the psychologist said, although the speed at which he can learn may be decreased.

Asks For One Zionist Group For All U. S.

The head of the American Jewish League for Israel appealed for the establishment of one "unitary Zionist group" in the U. S. Ezra Z. Shapiro, the League's president, said the formation of an over-all group "to supplant the current plethora of organizations would strengthen and increase the effectiveness of Zionist operations in the United States."

Mr. Shapiro spoke at the opening session of the third national assembly of the League at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York. He also announced that his group had been admitted to membership in the American Zionist Council, which represents all Zionist groups in the country.

Mr. Shapiro also defended the "right to petition," declaring that "as proud citizens of this great land, we have exercised and shall continue to exercise the right to address our representatives on matters of vital American interests," reports the New York Times. His remarks were in answer to a statement by Senator J. W. Fulbright, Democrat, of Arkansas, who had scored pressure groups for seeking "to inject the Arab-Israel dispute into domestic politics."

Miss Sharon Segal, 4615 Bourret Avenue, entertained twenty guests at her home at a shower for Miss Frema Shuster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shuster, 6785 Mountain Sights Avenue, the fiancee of Seymour Goldstein, son of Harry Goldstein, 7352 Ostell Crescent, and the late Mrs. Ethel Goldstein. The hostess was in a brown sheath, with square neckline; and short, puffed sleeves; and had a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Shuster wore a royal-blue, shirtmaker dress, made with a small, Peter Pan collar; and full skirt. Miss Frema Shuster, the honoured guest, was in a printed organza, shirtmaker dress, made with a Peter Pan collar; three-quarter-length sleeves; and full skirt with a wristlet of white carnations. The table was trimmed with a centerpiece of spring flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bush, 4672 Vezina Avenue, gave a party at Miss Montreal, to celebrate the sixteenth birthday of their daughter, Brenda; sister of Gary, aged ten years; granddaughter of Mrs. Edith Bush, of that address, and the late Barney Bush; and of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Aronovitch. Mrs. Bush wore a green, printed silk sheath, made with a square neckline; and a green and white straw hat; and had a corsage of white carnations. Mrs. Edith Bush, grandmother, wore a mauve printed sheath; with a matching hat. Brenda was in a black dress, with a square neckline, full skirt; and a bouquet of baby pink roses. A pink and white heart-shaped birthday cake adorned with centerpieces of pink roses trimmed the table. Here for the occasion were: Mrs. Louis Bush, and Mrs. Jack Kalakore, both of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Reiskind, 111 Duchastel Avenue, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Michael, who was called to the Reading of the Law, at Adath Israel Synagogue. He is the grandson of Mrs. Fagie Becker, 5998 Park Avenue. Following services, Mr. and Mrs. Reiskind were hosts at a Kiddush luncheon in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Reiskind, wore a taupe silk dress, with its own jacket; and a beige straw hat. Mrs. Becker, was in a two-piece, blue silk suit; with a white straw hat. Seated at the head table with the above were: Rabbi Charles Bender, Cantor and Mrs. Eugene Goldberger, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ilieff, Mr. and Mrs. David Reiskind, and Mrs. Sarah Just, of Jersey City, N. J. The bar-mitzvah boy spoke. Rabbi Bender asked a blessing over the challah. A white and red bar-mitzvah cake, and red and white carnations trimmed the table.

Miami Center Has Open Doors For Jews Who Flee From Cuba

The Jewish Community Center in Miami, Florida, has opened its doors for service to a growing number of Jewish refugee families from Cuba's terror. Situated at the gateway to the U.S. from Latin America, Miami has felt the main impact of the current Cuban crisis as thousands of escaping Cuban families have fled to freedom in North America. Center authorities, in continuing touch with local and national welfare agencies, state that the situation is bound to become more serious as time goes on and immigration continues.

The Greater Miami Jewish Community Center is one of more than 300 Centers and YM-YWHAs affiliated with the National Jewish Welfare Board (JWB) which reports that this current activity of the Miami Center is typical of the manner in which local Centers have responded to community crises in the past. Centers played a large part in maintaining community stability during the depression and welcomed the refugees from Nazi Germany in the late 30s. They have been focal points of emergency operations for civil defense, in floods, snow storms, and other local disasters.

In Miami, Cuban families have been taken into all branches of the Center for a variety of activities and service. These families, transplanted to a new society, are usually in sharply reduced, and sometimes desperate, economic circumstances. The most frequent request they make to the Center is for day care for their pre-school children, so that mothers may seek employment. In many cases, mothers and children arrive alone, because the fathers were unable to leave Cuba. Even those fathers who are in Miami are frequently unable to get employment.

Cuban families at the Center are especially concerned that their young children will not feel isolated, and that they will continue to have a Jewish cultural background. Adult adaptation to American community life is difficult because of language, social, and cultural differences, but a number of parents have become integrated into Center programs and have helped its campaign for the Combined Jewish Appeal. The youngsters have been accepted wholeheartedly by their American playmates. Miami children have become interested in learning Spanish words and phrases, and at the same time help the Cuban youngsters to learn English.

Efraim H. Gale, executive director of the Greater Miami Jewish Community Center, has represented the agency on a community committee set up by the Greater Miami Jewish Federation in cooperation with the United Hias, to plan welfare services for Cuban refugees who are Jewish. This group is in liaison with the special committee recently established by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, under the chairmanship of Dillon Myer.

MARRIAGES

MITTLEMAN-STOLOVITCH

The marriage of Miss Norma Stolovitch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stolovitch, 2415 Redford Road, to Marvin Mittleman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Saul Mittleman, of Brooklyn, N. Y., took place at Beth David-Beth Yitzchok-Kehal Jeshurun Synagogue, on February 25, at half-past seven o'clock. Rabbi I. J. Teicher officiated, assisted by Cantor J. Dlin. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a gown of white peau de soie, cut with a fitted bodice; a round neckline; long sleeves; and full bouffant skirt ending in a long train. Her veil of tulle illusion was arranged with a crown of seed-pearl-beads; and she carried a white prayer book with white orchids and white satin streamers. Miss Doris Coleman, as maid of honour, wore a mauve chiffon gown, designed with a round neckline; short sleeves; and full, bouffant skirt; also a matching headdress; and carried a cascade of pink and white carnations. Misses Tina Mittleman, sister of the groom, and Evelyn Burt were bridesmaids. Each wore a gown of mauve chiffon, made with short sleeves; and full skirt; with a crown of that material; and carried a semi-cascade of pink and white carnations. Sherry Stahl, niece of the bride, as flower girl, wore a party dress of white and blue organza; and a bandeau of blue carnations; and carried a basket of rose petals. Philip Mittleman was best man for his brother. The ushers were: Murray Goldstein, Murray Goldberg, Louis Strong, Jack Stahl, Rubin Stahl, and Gerald Keller. Marshall Stahl, nephew of the bride, was page boy. Pink and white carnations were the wedding flowers. Mrs. Stolovitch, mother of the bride, wore a lilac-coloured, peau de soie, beaded sheath; and her hat matched it. Mrs. Mittleman, mother of the groom, was in a rose-coloured, peau de soie gown; with a hat of the same material. Their corsages were of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Mittleman spent their wedding trip in Miami Beach, Florida. The bride departed in a beige and brown wool suit. They have taken up residence in New York. Here for the marriage were: his parents; his brother and sister, Philip Mittelman, and Miss Tina Mittleman; Mr. and Mrs. M. Goldstein, Mr. and Mrs. K. Wurtzel, Mrs. N. Halifax, N. S., Chapter of Hadassah showed Israeli spring fashions and hats around the world, in the Nova Scotia Hotel. Two showings were given during the day in the Commonwealth Room. The matinee was under the patronage of Mrs. R. L. Stanfield; and the evening performance was under the patronage of Mrs. E. C. Plow. Producing the show was Mrs. Elliott Fineberg. The commentator was Mrs. Nathan Green; fashion co-ordinator, Mrs. S. S. Jacobson; ticket convener, Mrs. Leonard Goldberg, 6 Woodlawn Terrace.

Shaar Shalom Synagogue, in Halifax, N. S., celebrated Jewish Music Month at a musicale. The program was arranged by Julius Silverman with the co-operation of the Halifax Musicians Trust Fund and members of the Halifax Symphony orchestra. The program included Suite, by Ernest Bloch, played by Charles Tobias; a selection by Phyllis Ensher, harpist, and Frank Peters, oboist; and a string quartette with Charles Tobias, Julius Silverman, Kathleen Banks, violinists, and Sandra Campbell, cellist. Piano accompaniments were by Monique Gusset with commentary by Julius Silverman. The second portion of the concert featured the junior choir, directed by Mrs. Leonard Fineberg. The group range in age from seven to fifteen years. They sang the "Seven Golden Buttons", a legend with music taken from an old tale and dramatised by Meyer Levin. Following the concert, tea was served in the social room.

"Let all who are hungry come and eat"

Once again . . . the words of freedom, hope, warmth, unchanged through the generations. The Seder is ready, the afikoman set aside. The wine cups are filled, the kitchen brims with promise. The children, scrubbed, hungry, curious, solemn, wait.

Now. A little voice, anxious, speaks up big and clear. Wherefore is this night distinguished from all other nights? And, with the old, old shared responses . . . the deep family feeling, tradition comes alive once more.

For generations, the Goodman family has served this tradition proudly, with the finest Passover Matzos. All strictly kosher . . . supervised by Rabbi Mendel Chodrow and other leading orthodox rabbis.

MAZEL TOV

made from sweet Concord grapes by the most famous name in Canadian winemaking!

Years of planning It took more than three years, after the decision was taken to introduce a kosher wine, before the first beautiful decanter of "Mazel Tov" was placed on the market. The strict details of Kashruth had to be arranged with the rabbis, and elaborate testing and research undertaken. From all this came "Mazel Tov"—a wine we are proud to offer from coast to coast in Canada.

Delicious "heimish" flavour This sweet rich wine in its beautiful decanter bottle recaptures the taste you used to know. It is the wine you sipped at the Pesach seders, the wine beside the candles at the Sabbath meal, the wine you made Kiddush with at Yom Tov, and the wine with which you toasted "L'chayim" at every simcha. "Mazel Tov" is a wine you'll "remember" with pleasure as you drink it. It's a wine that says "Mazel Tov" on your lips, as in the glass.

Old Heads, Young Hearts

It was just another ordinary day in the former Turkish Army fortress at Safed. The crisp, invigorating mountain air was laden with the pungent aroma of pines, and the stout walls of the fortress exhaled moist coolness. But then, as the day progressed, a certain difference was noticeable. The oldsters, for the fortress has long been a home for the aged administered by Malben-JDC, the Joint Distribution Committee services in Israel, bustled about more than usual. There was an atmosphere of heightened sensitivity and beauty; the geraniums were redder, the grass was greener.

It was a day of festive preparations, and for two in particular — for this was their wedding day. The bride, 80-year-old Rivka, from Belaya Tzerkov, in Russia, remembers her life as the village blacksmith's daughter, the handsome young girl with a string of suitors. The groom is Polish-born Itzhak, one year her senior, who on most occasions talks about himself as "the father of a fallen war hero."

Rivka is a dainty, little lady who looks much younger than her four-score years. Her poise, patience, and outward composure betray nothing of past tragedy which included the death of her husband and three sons at Stalingrad. Itzhak, too, is amiability and neatness personified. His constant modesty recedes only when he relates the heroism of his officer-son in the Polish army, who became one of the martyrs of the notorious Katin massacre.

Before they met at the Safed old-age home late in 1958, both had resigned themselves to live out their lives uneventfully. Rivka, who had arrived in Israel with her daughter only a year earlier, tried settling down together with the family which included three grandchildren. But her son-in-law, a carpenter, was unable to get regular work and it soon became apparent that there was neither money nor room for all of them. Itzhak, a house-painter by profession, had during his eight years in Israel, eked out a bare living by doing odd jobs on the farms of good-natured neighbors, his payment usually consisting of bed and board. In both instances the Malben-JDC old-age home was their only alternative.

But, as in the case of so many among the nearly 4,500 residents in Malben-JDC's homes for the aged, a few months of skilled medical care, congenial companionship, and light work in the home renewed their interest in life. They were drawn to each other and spent many hours together. Soon the ladies in the Safed institution could be heard gossiping about the blossoming of yet another romance in their midst. As the day of the wedding came near, Rivka busied herself with sewing a special dress and Itzhak eagerly got out his box of brushes and tools in readiness for giving their new room a fresh coat of paint.

Finally, on the day of the wedding, the two took it with a calmness compatible with their white hair. But in their eyes it was not difficult to see their joy at having found each other. For, as the proverb has it, "most enviable of all combinations is an old head and a young heart."

W.J.C. Research Institute Marks Its 20th Year Of Informing The World On The Jewish Situation

Every day to the headquarters of the World Jewish Congress in New York there comes a stream of visitors to ask advice on filing a claim against Germany; to talk to some one about property taken over by the Polish Government; to offer testimony against Nazi war criminals facing trial in Germany; to ask what is the latest situation in negotiations for compensation from Austria. The visitors are almost invariably directed to the World Jewish Congress research wing, known as the Institute of Jewish Affairs, which marked its 20th anniversary on February 1.

Quite apart from the personal callers, there is a daily bundle of mail with similar questions. But the Institute is also the regular recipient of reports from World Jewish Congress offices and affiliates on the position of Jews all over the world, of information on latest developments in compensation and restitution to Nazi victims, as well as news about anti-Semitic groups and organizations and their activities.

The Institute of Jewish Affairs was created in February, 1941, as a research wing, providing the scientific basis for the policies and activities of the World Jewish Congress. At that time European Jewry was cut off from the rest of the world, in particular the Jewish world, and was soon to endure martyrdom on a scale unexampled even in the tragic annals of the Jews. The Institute had to pierce the pall enveloping European Jewry in order to ascertain the true facts of the situation. To this end it devised and organized its own means and channels through which it received the necessary information. Sifting this intelligence and clearing up contradictory reports became a major task.

The unique material compiled in this way during the war constituted a source of information probably unavailable in any other place. Particularly impressive was the collection of anti-Jewish laws and regulations in Europe, of which considerable use was made after the war in the Nuremberg trials of war criminals; and the files containing information on every country and region over which the Nazis had extended their rule.

To make the facts known and to bring to the Jewish and non-Jewish world a realization of what Nazi and Fascist domination meant to the Jewries of the countries involved, the Institute published between 1941 and 1943 a number of studies, the most important of which were "Hitler's Ten-Year War On The Jews"; and "Starvation Over Europe". They were used by the International Military Tribunal in Nuremberg in preparing the case against the top Nazi war criminals. Parallel with research on the current Jewish situation, post-war planning proceeded and the Institute drafted a number of studies on special problems, such as the effects of Nazi persecution; the methods of Nazi penetration; minority rights; Jewish refugees; restitution and compensation; human rights; war crimes; migration; and anti-Semitism.

The important part played by the Institute in the trial and conviction of the major Nazi war criminals, and particularly in preparing the Jewish count against them, was acknowledged by the late Justice Robert H. Jackson, of the United States Supreme Court, who was American Chief of Counsel in the prosecution of the top war criminals. Upon the conclusion of the trial, Justice Jackson wrote: "The Nazi persecution of the Jews was one of the major phases of the Prosecution's case, and the successful presentation of that aspect of the case was greatly aided by the contribution made by the Institute of Jewish Affairs. I warmly commend the Institute and its Director for the initiative, devotion, industry, and service rendered to the cause of justice to war criminals."

In recent years the Institute, under the direction of Dr. Nehemiah Robinson, has prepared a considerable number of memoranda submitted by the World Jewish Congress to the United Nations, to other international bodies as well as to governments. One of the department's major efforts was the preparation and submission of material on anti-Semitism for the U.N. Sub-commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities. Commentaries on the Genocide Convention and on the Universal Declaration of Human Rights have won high praise from U.N. officials, from a number of governments and international bodies.

Quite apart from its special studies, the Institute regularly issues a quarterly survey, entitled, Current Events In Jewish Life; a monthly, "Periodic Reports On The Jewish Situation"; and also publishes special brochures on topical Jewish issues as well as guides and information on indemnification and restitution laws applicable to Nazi victims all over the world. Dr. Robinson's expert knowledge of such matters has made him a key figure in all negotiations between Jewish groups and the governments of Germany and Austria.

The Institute has had another task within recent months: to help trace witnesses to war crimes. At the request of German prosecuting authorities, the World Jewish Congress has attempted to locate survivors of concentration camps and to secure from them eye-witness testimony concerning the activities of specified camp commandants and their aides. So far, more than 60 witnesses have been located and some have already been flown to Germany to testify in Nazi trials.

The Need For Counselling Before The Final Stage Of Marital Collapse

A report on the first 18 months' operation of the Marriage Counselling Bureau of The Jewish Theological Seminary of America and the Rabbinical Assembly of America was issued jointly by Rabbi Bernard Mandelbaum, Provost of the Seminary, and director of its Religio-Psychiatric Center; and Dr. Sidney Furst, psychiatrist of the Bureau. The Bureau, which was conceived as a cooperative effort drawing upon the professional skills of rabbi, psychiatrist, and marriage counsellor, began operations on June 1, 1959.

From its inception, the Bureau has sought to assist rabbis in the field in two ways: by offering direct counselling to individuals referred by the rabbi; and by helping the rabbis to recognize symptoms of emotional disturbance in cases referred by them, so that earlier referrals would be made possible. It was suspected that much of the marital discord which ultimately led to family collapse, as reflected in our high divorce rate, was known to clergymen in its early stages, at a time when counselling can be more effective in preserving the marriage, or at least in protecting the children from some of the more damaging effects of divorce.

Another theory voiced when the Counselling Bureau was launched was that many individuals, who have confidence in the rabbi who sanctified them in marriage and are encouraged in the marriage contract itself to turn to him for advice in time of difficulty, would be more amenable to the additional help of psychiatric guidance, when needed, if it could be offered to them with religious sanction, and under traditional religious auspices. It was also suspected that many rabbis, in addition to their other duties, were probably supporting members of their congregations in unsatisfactory marriages, instead of assisting them to get help, and thus to achieve better relationships.

Practical experience over an 18-month period has produced ample evidence of the validity of these premises. During this period, 145 interviews have been conducted by the marriage counsellor. Some of these represented interviews with the spouse of the person originally seeking service. Others, included in the count, represent second or third interviews, undertaken in spite of the fact that treatment is not visualized as part of the service, in order to help the client to understand his need, and to seek appropriate help.

Of the 56 couples seen, 17 were referred for psychiatric help; 15 for further rabbinic counselling. Most of the remainder were helped directly by the marriage counsellor, although a small residue discontinued service. Each of these referrals was determined upon at one of the weekly staff conferences of the Bureau, at which rabbi, psychiatrist and marriage counsellor pool their technical knowledge and professional orientation to reach a cooperative and balanced recommendation for each couple.

In working with these cases, the Bureau has been able to sensitize the rabbis to the presence of genuine emotional difficulties by meeting with the referring rabbi, explaining to him the nature of the problem presented, and indicating to him how he can extend supportive help once the couple has received treatment. In addition, the rabbis who have been involved in this consultative procedure, have prevailed upon the Religio-Psychiatric Center to provide similar, although more generalized, orientation sessions to their colleagues.

These sessions have been arranged through the regional organizations of the Rabbinical Assembly of America and have heard presentations by the Bureau team, consisting of Dr. Furst or one of the other psychiatric consultants affiliated with the Center, Rabbi David Silverman and the marriage counsellor. These sessions serve to assure follow-up for Bureau clients, as well as to provide important education for the rabbis involved.

As a result of these sessions, the Rabbi, in his day to day dealings with people in marital difficulty and with young people contemplating marriage, brings a new dimension to the understanding of marriage which he learns from the Jewish tradition. His insight into the marital relationship has traditionally been buttressed by his commitment to the sanctity of the family, and is now aided also by an understanding of the important role of mental health in enabling the individuals to sustain their relationship.

This additional insight helps him to recognize disturbance where it exists, and in those cases to draw upon the skills of the Counselling Bureau as a valuable adjunct to the traditional normative powers of religion in preserving the sanctity of the home. The Bureau has had two indications of this new insight: the growing number of young people referred to it for pre-marital counselling; and the couples who are referred for help before reaching the final stage of marital collapse.

Such assurance of the validity of the Bureau's service, as well as the accumulating evidence of the need for such cooperative religio-psychiatric activity has led the Seminary to expand the one-year course in human behavior, required of all Rabbinical Department students, to the present two-year curriculum, initiated in the current academic year.

W. J. C. LEADER

If the same principle were applied to the other rights in the Universal Declaration, that document would become worthless. Did the right of freedom of speech, for example, cease to be valid if a government thought that too many people were taking advantage of it? Such an approach would nullify the whole system designed to implement international concern for human rights. The validity of those rights remained unaffected by temporary considerations of expediency arising out of the present structure of international relations.

Dr. Perlzweig pointed out that group emigration had been a major influence in building up the United States as a great power, and that the exercise of the same right had helped to create the independent states of Latin America. Many governments had by their actions recognized the legitimacy of group migration. He recalled the exchange of Greek and Turkish populations, and the repeated invitations of the Soviet Union to Armenians of other citizenships to return to their ancestral home.

Turning to the Soviet speaker, Dr. Perlzweig reminded him that it was now a long established practice of the UN not only to accept but to seek material from non-governmental sources, and that so far as objectivity and accuracy were concerned governments had proved as fallible as other institutions. What Mr. Sapozhnikov was now seeking to do was to exclude from the consideration of the Rapporteur, a distinguished Philippine jurist, Judge Jose D. Ingles, evidence which would be admissable in a court of law. In any case, the right of consultative non-governmental organizations to be heard was safeguarded by Art. 71 of the Charter.

So far as the problem of discrimination was concerned, added Dr. Perlzweig, it might be true that on the surface there was none when a right was equally denied to all the inhabitants of a country. There was thus created a situation of "equal justice for all," which could hardly be accepted as valid by the international community. Moreover this device in fact discriminated against those who sought to exercise the right which had in fact been abrogated.

In a subsequent statement in reply to the debate, Judge Ingles, supporting Dr. Perlzweig's contention on the right to emigrate, said that to accord the right to certain individuals but to impose a quantitative limit on its exercise was in fact to create a discrimination which would bring it within the framework of his inquiry.

York Herald Tribune. He went on to declare that an increased immigration of American youth to Israel is "fateful to American Jewry."

PSYCHOLOGIST

Dr. Lorge was born in New York. His father, Solomon Lorge, was a retail butcher. Educated in the city schools and at Townsend Harris Hall High School, a secondary institution for gifted students, he became a Fellow of the School of Education at City College in 1925. He graduated from City College in 1926 and the next year became a research assistant at the Institute of Educational Research at Columbia.

He received his M. A. at Columbia in 1927 and his Ph.D. there three years later, says New York Times. He had been connected with Columbia continuously since those early days, proceeding through the grades of research associate and associate professor to become Professor of Education.

He wrote "The Columbia Mental Maturity Scale" (in collaboration; "A Semantic Count of English Words" (with Dr. Thorndike); "Retirement and the Industrial Worker" (with J. Tuckman); and other books and articles on psychology and semantics.

Dr. Lorge was sought as a consulting editor by many educational publications and belonged to a large number of learned societies in his field. He was a former president of the Psychometric Society and former vice-president and chairman of the psychology section of the New York Academy of Sciences. He also had been president of the educational psychology division of the American Psychological Association, says the New York Times. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Sarah Wolfson Lorge; two daughters, Paula Lee and Beatrice Susan Lorge; a brother, Morton; and two sisters, Mrs. Florence Okun and Mrs. Ruth Diamond.

REMEMBER
The memories of Passovers gone by—the search and sale of the Chametz—Grandpa poking around the kitchen, making the horseradish and the Charoseth—putting on the new suit of clothes and shoes—pockets full of hazel nuts—and almonds—anxiously waiting for the Seder to start—Uncle Joe and Aunt Sadie were always late—the whole family together—Grandpa looking like a king propping the pillow on the chair beside him—Grandma tired after baking and cooking all day but "Ma Nishtanah" my queen, he called her—the Kiddush and then my turn for "Ma Nishtanah" and the answer given with Grandpa's voice ringing out over all—the first half of the Haggadah almost over—even the bitter herbs tasted so good—Passover it was always "strong"—all were compelled to eat it otherwise we could not get the hard boiled egg and salt water—and then the meal—nobody, but nobody, could cook better than Grandma—we ate—and ate and then the "Benchen"—and the rest of the Haggadah—and some more cups of wine—and the opening of the door—and the stories of how in the old country someone frightened the whole family by appearing at that door—but best of all the songs with which the second half of the Haggadah abound—and the feeling of drowsiness—contentment—and the thought that tomorrow the same thing once more.....

STAR TIME (2)
Last week we told you about Tommy Ambrose, one of the top stars who are available to play your next big event.
This week we're going to talk about a prodigy — a swinging seventeen-year-old called Paul Hoffert.
Paul is a jazz musician, but don't let that scare you. He's happiest with an up-tempo swing tune, but he knows his way around not only the piano, but the bass, the drums, and the vibraphone, too.
He's done half a dozen big TV dates, his first longplay album is a steady seller. If you're young in heart, you'll dig him the most.
Paul's just another part of the entertainment available by calling us.

Something New In Statesmanship?

Due to the kind interest of friendly business acquaintances the Canadian Jewish Review discovered recently that the Canadian Jewish News of Toronto had been sending out letters which claimed that that publication "is now the official spokesman for organized Jewry in our province", referring to Ontario. There must have been quite a few of these letters, since they were mimeographed. What the Canadian Jewish Review saw was on a letter-head of the Canadian Jewish News which named the publishers as Meyer W. Gasner and J. Irving Oelbaum. Mr. Gasner is the new-born chairman of the Central Region of the Canadian Jewish Congress. It so happens that the mast-head of his publication lists Dorothy C. Nurenberger as the publisher.

Now, the Canadian Jewish Congress is supposed to be, and is supported as, an assembly of the people, whereas, the Canadian Jewish News is a private, would-be commercial venture, in green hands. However green those hands may be they are not young enough, in chronological years, to be thrown back into the water. And it is just possible that the right does know what the left is doing, and vice versa, in a reckless, disordered effort to garner circulation and business since it takes too long to build it ethically brick by brick.

It should be understood that it is highly unlikely that the many people who worked so hard to establish the Canadian Jewish Congress as an organization presentable anywhere in the world of Jews and Gentiles, had in mind a creation that could be exploited commercially for the financial gain of any individual or group. It takes a long time to compose an organization such as the Congress. But it would take no time at all to reduce that Congress to a shambles if it is to be regarded as a fixture for the personal realization of private dreams of public glory.

In this connection the following communication is offered, and not "inadvertently":

Dear Mrs. Cohen:

You recently wrote me drawing attention to the action of the Canadian Jewish News in describing itself as the official spokesman of the Canadian Jewish Congress. I took this matter up recently and I can now inform you that the organization states, through my informant, that if it ever indicated this it was done inadvertently and we are assured that this approach will not be repeated.

Yours sincerely,

Mental Health Insights In Judaism

BY DAVID WEISS, OF MONTREAL, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF THE BARON DE HIRSCH INSTITUTE AND JEWISH CHILD WELFARE BUREAU

Contemporary medical and behavioural sciences are giving great emphasis to the importance of individuality in healthy personality functioning. Yet sound personality and character development are threatened by the tensions and stresses of an urbanized and mechanized society; by the unspeakable dread and anxiety implicit in atomic energy and hydrogen bombs and their potential for the annihilation of the human race. In personal, family, social, and economic, as well as political life, reflections of this ontic anxiety have become pervasive and threatening to human fulfilment. The great theologian, Paul Tillich, in his recent book "The Courage To Be", has traced the evolution of this ontic anxiety and its meaning for modern man.

From the psycho-therapeutic sphere of healing the emotionally disturbed and sick who have thus retreated from the risks of modern turmoil and stress, comes the clarion advice and guidance echoing through every popular media of communication: man must be firm and faithful to his own human existence.

But he can only do so if he understands and embraces the unacceptable aspects of human and social experience, affirming and reaching out to humanize, to socialize; to discipline and control the otherwise overwhelming destructive forces implicit in the stresses which reverberate daily in the halls of the United Nations; in every continent, indeed, in space or the heavens above!

The mental health of the world begins and ends in the mental health of each living person. For this reason medical and social sciences have been studying and researching the unknown terrain of the inner as well as outward manifestation of the emotional and psychological life of the person. New insights have been proclaimed as if these were never known before. Perhaps it were better to say that rediscoveries of ancient wisdom and knowledge are now being confirmed through modern techniques resulting from current expressions of these problems.

We recall the chain of human experience and human sagacity at different times and places. Thus Shakespeare could say: "This above all, to thine own self be true". Socrates said the same thing in his own time and in his own context. Freud has said it in recent times and this has been confirmed by contemporary leaders in ego-psychology, theology, philosophy. There can be no human community unless there are human beings comprising it.

For this reason it is worthwhile to recall the remarkable insights of the famous Rabbi Hillel I. He lived in the first Century before the common era and came to Palestine from Babylonia. He founded a School named after himself, and was perhaps the first biblical exegete. He has come down through Mishnaic literature as the father of the maxim. He it was who proposed radical conceptions of the individual and his social role which became the paramount focus of his teachings.

It is Hillel who preceded the famous golden rule by defining the ethical and moral content of religion as the prohibition from doing that which was hateful to others, that which was hateful to oneself. He gave prominence to the importance of the healthy body in which was enshrined the healthy mind and soul. It is he to whom we turn for the most remarkable mental health concept which through 2,000 years has been the rediscovered key to the solution of individual bewilderment and sickness.

Hillel proclaimed the following cardinal concept which is, in today's terms, the nub of all treatment of mentally disturbed and sick people. His statement that "If I am not for myself, who am I?" conforms to the recognition that without individual integrity and affirmation of one's own being, there can be no ground for existence and for social experience except the retreat into mental illness, if not suicide.

But Hillel is not just generalizing or distorting a healthy egoism into egotism. He adds to this concept the two vital correlations, as follows: "If not now, when?" Here he emphasizes the importance of the presentness or present tense of the actuality of experience of self-expression and realization. Living as a human being in a mentally healthy and sound way is not done by retreating into the past or into a deferred future by suspending the presentness of experience.

Hillel goes on in this admonition finally to relate the individual to the social. He makes the third vital qualification: "And if I am only for myself, what am I?" Again there is here the profound understanding that man is not an island unto himself, a self-sufficient organism or system who can become human by pure solipsistic introversion. Hillel has also said elsewhere: "Separate not thyself from the congregation". In modern terms this means one can only experience self-fulfilment and self-development in and through others. Therefore, the individual must find a balance between self-affirmation through social participation.

This is what the modern philosopher, Martin Buber, has said in the trenchant observation that: "All living is meeting". Buber means by this that the individual achieves his true integrity only through participation in the human community and by human encounters which help to realize and actualize his integrity and being.

We have in Hillel other allusions and prescriptions based on profound understanding of the human situation which pre-figured not only the Sermon on the Mount and the Golden Rule, but more recent theologies and philosophies. When he discusses the nature of human existence, and points out that at the point of drowning the whole world stands or falls in the consciousness of the individual, he has echoed down the ages the profound awareness which has been expressed by Frederic Husserl in his concept of the Lebenswelt.

He has also anticipated the modern existentialist idea that being, or ontological fulfilment, is the condition for all existence and experience. Hillel is in a profound sense related to the ideas of Buber, Freud, Tillich, and others who have emphasized the importance that the individual in any given time and place can only confront the inherent anxiety of life and death, and its corrolary of emptiness and meaninglessness as well as doubt and condemnation by the positive expression of the courage to be a human being and at the same time have the courage to be part of the human community.

In this way Hillel's lessons and meaning for our time are as fresh and as valuable as any of the lessons and insights which are now flowing from the laboratories, the clinics, the hospitals, and the research teams whose task it is, before too late, to find some of the solutions to the imponderable ques-

Pre-Passover Message For "The Season Of Our Freedom"

BY DR. SAMUEL BELKIN, PRESIDENT OF YESHIVA UNIVERSITY, IN NEW YORK

Passover marks the eternal struggle of man to gain freedom. This means not only the achievement of freedom from totalitarianism, but the achievement of freedom for men to live creatively, and in harmony together. To the ancient Israelites, in their flight from their Egyptian oppressors, Passover simply meant an escape from tyranny. But the most profound meaning of this holiday lies not in this escape, but in the birth of the proud nation which followed. Out of a disunited, enslaved people, Moses fashioned a nation held together by a common faith. From that day to this, the Jewish people have carried forward their profound belief in the creative and unifying elements within man's nature. Thus, even as we celebrate Passover today with joy and thanksgiving, we do not forget that the escape from bondage marks only the beginning of the search for freedom.

The name by which the holiday is sometimes known, "Zeman Cherusenu", means "the season of our freedom." The use of the word "our" shows the intent to make every Jew in all ages feel as if he, personally, has been liberated. This heritage places upon each person the obligation of an individual search for freedom. Thus, we see Passover as an expression of man's never-ending struggle against inner tyrannies, the weak, ignoble, and unproductive aspects of his own nature. And it is only with the affirmative, whole-hearted acceptance of divine laws, as set forth in the Torah, that man achieves the true inner freedom to which Passover is a memorial.

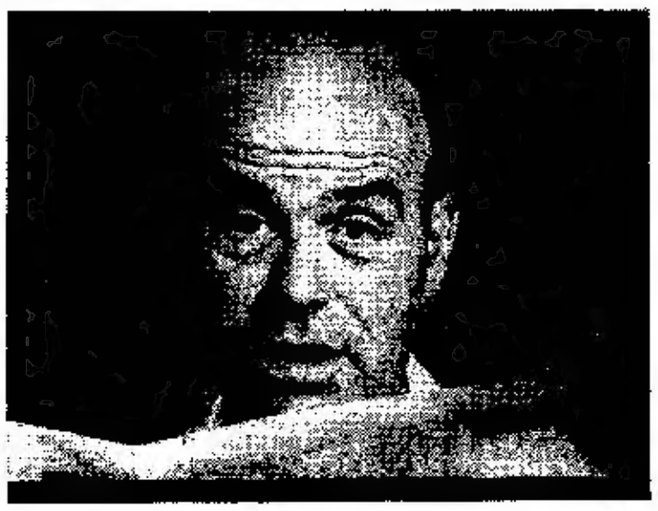
How do I save?



When it comes to saving here's a trick worth knowing. Avoid writing cheques against your Savings Account. Impossible? Not at all! Just open a Personal Chequing Account at the "Royal" and use it for paying bills.

Then you can keep your Savings Account strictly for saving. The bank calls this the 2-Account Plan — a sure-fire way to save. It makes sense. It's business-like. And it's easy... Why don't you give it a try?
